

How to choose our Wedding Attendants

How many attendants should we have?

Consider the following:

1. Who you would like to honor as attendants at your wedding and what role will you designate to whom.
2. How many attendants would you like to have for your ceremony?
3. Your budget: Before you decide on a number and roles, keep in mind that you will have to buy a gift for each attendant. You also need to provide the maid of honor and bridesmaids with bouquets and the best man and groomsmen with boutonnieres. Additionally ask yourself if you are ready to cover costs for attendants who cannot afford the expenses?
4. It is a special honor but also a responsibility to be wedding attendants. So, before you ask, consider not only whether the people you invite are trustworthy and will accept the responsibility enthusiastically, but also if they can afford the expenses associated with the role, such as: the wedding attire, pre-wedding parties, possible travel expenses and lodging.
5. Not everyone you ask will accept.
6. The fact that the bride and groom do not need to have an equal number of attendants, nor must there be an equal number of male and female attendants. It is also not uncommon to have more than one best man, maid or matron of honor, Flower and ring bearers.

Who should we ask to be attendants?

Family members especially siblings and close friends who are trustworthy, dependable and enthusiastic and who will be able to fulfill all of their responsibilities, contribute the time, energy, and the expenses associated with the honor of being an attendant. However, you are not obligated to return the honor. In other words, if you were a wedding attendant at a friend's wedding, you are not required to invite them to serve as attendants in yours. You may consider inviting only siblings and their families to be your attendants. This will eliminate hurt feelings of friends who expect to be asked, including but not limited to non-reciprocal attendant honors. For second weddings, children from the previous marriages often serve as the attendants.

When should we ask our attendants to be in our wedding?

Soon after you announce your engagement, you need to decide who you would like to honor as your best man, maid of honor, bridesmaids, groomsmen, flower and ring bearers. Don't wait too long to invite them as you'll appreciate having their help early on and have a time cushion in case of needed changes. Invite those who live in close proximity, in person and those who are not, by phone. Once you have them confirmed, consider other people you wish to honor and invite them to be to be part of your wedding celebration. They can serve as seating ushers, guest book attendants and gifts monitors. You will bestow a great honor on people you invite to have ceremonial roles such as special readings, playing an instrument, or singing solos.

How can we give special honors to family members who are not attendants?

Consider the feelings of family members on both sides. Your wedding is very special to them and they want to participate, rather than merely be guests. Honoring them is a great way to make future family relationships more congenial. If they are not attendants, invite them to utilize their special skills and abilities. They can help with the planning, and-or get special roles at the wedding. Often their participation will add a special touch to your ceremony and reception. A beautiful custom is to invite them individually, (Aunt Betty) as a couple (Uncle John and Aunt Betty) or as a family (The ...Family) to light a candle. Just before they do, the bride, groom or master of ceremony introduces them to all the guests. Some brides and grooms like to add a few words about them as they are called up.

What do we need to do next?

Once you have chosen your bridal party, invite them to a gathering and introduce them to each other. Take this opportunity to inform them of the various duties and responsibilities that go with their roles so that there will be no surprises. Before accepting the roles, all parties should know exactly what is expected of them and then decide if they wish to accept. Always keep all channels of communication open. Have fun!

A Glossary of Wedding Attendants

Best man This man is responsible to help the groom as an aide and consultant throughout the wedding planning as well as be in charge of the groomsmen and their responsibilities. On the wedding day he is responsible to assure that the groom arrives at the ceremony on time, to sign the marriage license, to hold the bride's wedding ring at the altar, to present the groom's payment to the officiant and to participate in photography sessions.

Bride Her responsibilities are to plan the wedding with the groom, to look beautiful, to participate in photography sessions, together with the groom to thank the guests for coming, to mix and mingle and have lots of fun on the wedding day.

Bridesmaids; Trustworthy female friends and family members who work well together and with the bride. If you consider the Bride the Queen, they are like the Ladies of the Court. They are a team that is headed by the maid of honor. Their responsibilities are to help with pre-wedding tasks, to accompany the groomsmen at the ceremony, the receiving line and the dance floor to act as hostesses and to participate in photography sessions.

Father of the bride; Traditionally he paid the majority of the wedding expenses. Today however he most commonly participates in some of the expenses. Additionally, he leads his daughter to the altar, toasts the bride and groom, dances with his daughter, acts as a host and participates in photography sessions.

Father of the groom; He usually pays for the rehearsal dinner as well as a few other major items. Additionally, he toasts the bride and groom, dances with his new daughter in law, acts as a host and participates in photography sessions.

Flower girl – Flower child; A child between the ages of 3 and 8 or 9 is usually invited to walk down the aisle ahead of the bride, scattering flower petals from a wedding flower basket. Though traditionally this task was given to girls, thus the term Flower Girl, today, quite often, boys are invited to fulfill this task.

Groom; His responsibilities are to plan the wedding with his bride. Some of the duties grooms opt for are the music, Photography, videography, accommodations for out of town guests, transportation and the honeymoon. On the wedding day he is expected to toast his bride, to dance with her, to participate in photography sessions, together with his bride to thank the guests for coming, to mix and mingle and have lots of fun.

Groomsmen; Trustworthy male friends and family members whose responsibilities are to assist the groom in planning and preparing for the big day and decorate the getaway car. On the wedding day, they may be asked to assume the role of ushers, to escort the bridesmaids at the ceremony, to dance with them and with dateless ladies and act as semi-hosts at the reception.

Honor attendants; The best man and the maid of honor are the honor attendants. If you need to forgo gender-specific references, you may refer to them as: best person or person of honor.

Junior bridesmaids/junior groomsmen/junior ushers; Youngsters who are between the ages of 9-16 and are in the wedding party. They can be given special responsibilities such as passing out the wedding programs, attend to the guest book signing, keeping an eye on the gift table, etc.

Maid/matron/man of honor; The major helper to the bride during the wedding planning process and on the wedding day. Her responsibilities are to provide the bride with emotional support when needed, to be in charge of the bridal shower, to help the bride dress for the wedding, to adjust her train at the altar, to hold the wedding ring the bride gives her groom, to hold the bridal bouquet during vows, to collect gift envelopes at the reception, to care for the bride when necessary during the ceremony and reception, etc. Depending on the customs observed by the bride and groom she may be given the honor of signing the marriage license and toasting the bride and groom as well.

A Glossary of Wedding Attendants

Mother of the bride; The mother of the bride may serve as wedding planning helper, guest list coordinator, traditional reception hostess, and cheerleader. She is expected to attend the pre-wedding celebrations and rehearsal dinner. However, the nature and extent of the roles and responsibilities given her mother, is entirely up to the bride.

Mother of the groom The mother of the groom may assume some of the responsibilities that would otherwise be given to the mother of the bride. In addition to all other pre-wedding celebrations and rehearsal dinner, she should attend the bridal shower. At the reception she dances the "mother and son" dance with the groom.

Officiant; The clergy or government official such as a justice of the peace who performs the marriage ceremony.

Ring bearer; A young boy or girl aged four through eight or nine, who walks down the aisle just ahead of the flower girl or boy, carrying a ring pillow with ribbon that ties the rings to the pillow so they do not fall off or get lost.

Train bearers; Young boys and - or girls between the ages of 6 and 9 who carry the train, when an extra long train is attached to the bridal gown.

Ushers; Adults or teenagers who escort guests to their seats before the ceremony. Appointing ushers is a way to involve more people who are important to the bride and groom, as wedding attendants.

VIes; Very important extras are people who have special roles at the wedding. This group includes: readers, singers, poets, party aides etc.

Customs of different cultures

Hattabin; A Muslim term for male family or friends who help prepare the groom for the wedding. Moroccan Muslims, commonly have the hattabin propose to the bride on the behalf of the groom.

Huppah carriers; In Jewish weddings, family members and or friends who are close to the bride and groom are honored with the duty of holding up the Chuppah poles during the wedding ceremony.

Koumbaro; is the best man in Eastern Orthodox tradition. In traditional Greek weddings, the Koumbaro has many duties including participating in the crowning ceremony where he places crowns on the heads of the bride and the groom, then switches the crowns back and forth three times, uniting and binding them as life mates.

Vratimi; are male friends and family members who help the Koumbaro. They are actually the groomsmen in a traditional Greek Orthodox wedding.

A guide for the Maid of Honor and the Bridesmaids

- Be a good friend. Listen, advise when asked and be supportive.
- Be honest. Do not complement the bride if there is something you do not like. Let her know what you think and how you feel about..... (dress, shoes, hair style or color, makeup, jewelry etc.)
- Serving as a maid-matron of honor or as a bridesmaid can be very costly. If you cannot afford to pay for the specific dress chosen by the bride and its alterations, the matching shoes, the hairdo, the manicure and makeup, all in addition to gifts for the newlyweds, either let the bride know, or simply decline to be in the wedding party.
- Ask the bride what your duties are and what is expected of you and let her know what you can or cannot do.
- If you do not feel that the dress the bride chose for you looks good on you, or the type of shoes are uncomfortable, tell the bride. She will most likely accommodate you.
- Show your excitement. After all, Planning and preparing for a wedding are exciting activities.
- Be kind. Show lots of patience and understanding. Though planning a wedding while juggling many other responsibilities is exciting, it is also very emotional and stressful. So, forgive the bride occasional short temper, outbursts and such, should they occur. Once the wedding has passed, she will return to be herself, your good friend.
- Offer to help whenever and wherever help is needed. Let the bride, the groom and mothers know that you are ready and willing to lend a hand.
- Keep in touch with the bride to see how she is doing, if there is anything you can help with, or if any activities are scheduled.
- Offer your opinion during the wedding planning and preparations. The bride may accept it as given; accept it partially or not at all. Remember that you are there to help plan HER wedding and she has the final say.
- The night before the wedding, make sure your dress, accessories, cosmetics and toiletries and a wedding emergency kit are in order.
- On the wedding day, arrive at the site before the bride. She is counting on you to be there and will be refreshingly surprised to see you already at the site, awaiting her arrival.
- Before the wedding chaos begins, take a moment to congratulate the bride and tell her how beautiful she looks.
- During the ceremony, show your excitement. Stand up straight, keep your flowers up, and enjoy the Ceremony.
- After the ceremony, be sure to congratulate the groom, and at some point during the reception be sure to congratulate the parents of the bride and the groom too.
- At the reception, keep your eye on the bride to make sure she is comfortable.
- On the wedding day, smile a lot especially for photos and while greeting guests. Be an active participant, circulate, enjoy yourself and have a great time. Do not offer your opinion or criticism and do not complain about anything relating to the wedding. Stay until the end and offer to help with any remaining tasks.
- After the wedding, send a note and if you took pictures, copies of your pictures to the happy couple. Thank them for choosing to give you such an important role in their celebration and congratulate them once more.

A guide for the Ushers

The role of an usher is to give the ceremony a touch of formality and show true courtesy to the guests. Unless the ceremony is very formal, ushers may wear dark business suits.

They should stand at the entrance to the ceremony whether it is a lobby, a gathering area at the entrance to the building, or sanctuary door by the entrance aisle. The ushers should wear a boutonniere to distinguish themselves from the crowd of well-wishers.

The usher needs to inquire whether a guest wishes to sit in the left side pews facing the altar that are reserved for the bride or those on the left side of the altar, that are reserved for the groom. The usher offers to escort guests to their seats. Though they are an important part of the wedding party, the ushers do not sit at the head table but with the guests.

The procedure

- Lead by the arm, a female guest and the usher walk together to the next available seat.
- If the guests are a couple, the usher offers the lady his arm and the gentleman walks behind them.
- If the guest is a gentleman, the usher escorts him to his seat without offering his arm. Since the usher leads, he walks a few paces in front of the man.
- When the usher and guest arrive at the available seat, the usher stops, points to the seat and says something like: "here you are, enjoy the ceremony", or just "enjoy the ceremony".
- During the ceremony, the ushers stand at the back of the sanctuary, ready to assist any late arriving guests to their seats.
- Once the ceremony has concluded, and the bridal party and families have exited the ceremony site, the ushers invite the guests leave one row at a time.

Usher Instructions:

- Take your time. Walk slowly. Your task is to assist the guests. Keep pace with the guests you escort. This is especially important when you escort the elderly.
- Be tactful not pushy. Never insist that a guest must be escorted. Some people prefer to be independent and find their own seats. Let them.
- Be available to the guests who will benefit by your service. They will appreciate it.
- Avoid lengthy conversations with guests you are escorting. Many other guests are waiting to be seated.
- As the ceremony time approaches you may encounter many guests who will arrive at the same time. Be prepared, keep your cool and lead them to their seats in an orderly manner.
